it took his breath away holding the bank page he got the letter they're gonna take their house away i'm bout to have a daughter he yells it in the air felling the weight of a world that just don't care he lit a cigarette felt in on his lip driving home on a long road with regret he pull's the window down shout's it out loud pushing the pedal and praying lord help us now he's looking for a reason watching the sun coming down

can you hear when we call there where we fall
standing our backs against the wall Top of our lungs hallelujah where pain and love bleed into one baby when all you see is darkness coming down now
we all need forgiveness
coming round now

it was monday night under the street lights she's turing seventeen in seven nights out on the fairgrounds walking in mono tone she kicks a bottle as empty as her soul on the road alone in a house that's half home they give her pills just to kill when she feels alone she's looking for a reason watching the sun coming

take these broken streets take these broken dreams hold my hand like we we're walking free tell me it will change i see it in your face the hope the fear the love the faith i'm working late again slaving to make the rent i'm slanging coffee with dreams heavy as cement they're coming one by one the face of falling love i write a song with a prayer as i slide the cup

there where we fall
at the Top of our lungs how far we've come were pain and love bleed into one all that we need its so bitter sweet the pain that opens our eyes to see
coming down now
coming round now
