I don't know where I am.
I can't tell if I am really screaming or just dreaming.
And I don't know who you are,
All I know is I feel you there behind me, but you're never gonna find me.

Cause seven seas of tears and anger, I'm still around
And seven seas of sweet disaster, I've yet to drown.
Even as the moon is commanding the tide,
So will I cast out your empty offerings aside.
Yeah, you might leave the scar of your voice in my ears
Provided you can make them ring louder than I sing.

I don't know why it is
Everyone is always either coming or going.
And I don't know what you want
All I know is you might as well forget it, cause you're never gonna get it.

Cause seven seas of tears and anger, I'm still around
And seven seas of sweet disaster, I've yet to drown.
Even as the sun keeps his watch in the sky,
So will I be concious of the corner of my eye.
Yeah you might burn a brand in my mind with your mouth
Provided you can ruin my day faster than I play.

All these storms I've weathered mean nothing
If I don't keep my compass close to north.
If I don't drop my anchor to the bottom now and then
If I don't let the wind fill out my sails then I'll never see the shore
And all the Sirens' wails are getting harder to ignore.

Seven seas of tears and anger, I've stood my ground.
But if I should drown in my ocean of pride
I'll send you a postcard when I reach the other side
Or maybe I'll come back to the sea just to say,
Right after I smile and wink,
"See you when you sink"
