summer (butcher two)

saturday night
the summer's here
under clothes hands disappear buttons slip
they've gone stray
with them thoughts have gone away too far to see from the back seat where sleeping is the enemy in our hands

is more sense
than butchered words we don't understand to ourselves
our skin sticks
our palms sweat
our teeth click flashing glimpses do not see when daylight is the enemy

i can barely see your blue eyes i can barely make them out it's alright in this red your mouth tastes perfectly like cigarettes it's ok
it is fine
there's nothing just one thing on our mind

summer's here
the sound of breath is in our ears guess the coast is completely clear into water we disappear
