Blue Skies

I was born to watch the sunrise
There's something about the way that light shines in
your eyes,
Takes my breath away

Dark Night

Watching you beneath the moonlight.
It rests my soul to know you're feeling alright.
Fuels me now to play.

I beg tonight you're giving me
the chance that I deserve
To treat you like the princess that you are.
Exactly the right words to say roll over in my head
I've got lines for you but you deserve the truth.

Staring down my heart's reflection in your smile.
Losing sleep, this deep connection's not my style.
While allowing me the freedom that I know
I swore I needed but I want you wherever I go.
I couldn't lie to you.
If you're wondering if I want you,
I do.

Day Breaks.

I am lying there as she wakes.
Let's try it out and we'll just see how long it takes.
For you and I to fall in love.

I said before the night began,
I would not be afraid,
To tell you just exactly how I feel.
And maybe for a moment,
as I give myself away
I'm alive with you,
we lock eyes and see it's true.

Staring down my heart's reflection in your smile.
Losing sleep, this deep connection's not my style.
While allowing me the freedom that I know

I swore I needed but I want you wherever I go.
I couldn't lie to you.
If you're wondering if I want you,
I do.

If only this moment could be frozen in time
I could relive it on cue
If all that I say seems way out of line
Know I'd give it all to you

Blue Skies.
I was born to watch the sunrise
There's something about the way that light shines in
your eyes,
Takes my breath away
