She tries to find the weak spot
She tries to push through
To her I'm not a criminal she appeals
And wants the sentence reduced
Now I need to restrain don't want to give in Let me pay for all the crimes I've committed

Everything is caving in
From the weight of her world
My self-effacing fortress is too weak
To withstand the self-assured
Just get out while you can
He'll take you away
Once it's gone you'll understand

(Will you please) Save her from myself
Don't want to hurt anybody else
So I build my castle high
Warning you to stay away
The war I think it's over
But nobody really won
As I stumble through the rubble
Then I see what kept her from getting in
A wary heart
And the thickest of skin
