The stars above shine down below the fever you hold on this night deathly cold
I can feel from this side of the door I can feel Eleanor He said, sun don't rise... he said sun don't shine he said don't bring tomorrow to justify tonight
The moon is full-the stars are bright and the sky is a poisonous garden tonight.
Sip your Tequila. Give me some time to unlearn all I've learned for the spring to unwind and then came your sweet mouth I began to move mine.
They knew with the dawn-they knew with the day they knew what they had would be young naked prey and attacked from all sides by a world filled with poison and hate Eleanor trembles. Eleanor moans.
Somehow, this body is someone she always has known she cries tears on his chest O so silent and slow-
She said please don't go. Please don't go-and she cried and she died in his arms and he cried nevermore
the moon is full, the stars are bright
tonight.
