Invisible ink is what I'll use to write my name on your heart without (you) speaking I can read you as a child reads a book pages and pages and pages won't soothe the hunger though

words are air but your voice stays

surprising adventures and marvellous skies your unspoken tale reveals to me new perspectives new angles the landscape puts on as your silent tale goes on and on

talk to me with your eyes only eyes of emerald of crystal is your glance limpid and obscure as the simplest deepest secret uncomprehensible mystery clear as lunar light your voice shines in the sharp air and the view changes again again and again and again...
