(Jean Chapel - Alda Calongne)

No one can cry like a woman can
It's been that way since time began
No one on earth is lonelier than a lonely woman.

Her life without love is like a rose
That wilts and dies when her lover goes
You're listening to someone who really knows a lonely woman.

No one can cry like a woman can
It's been that way since time began
No one on earth is lonelier than a lonely woman.

Is this my heart or drums that began
For only the sounds of the world closing in
When I remember how long I have been a lonely woman.

No one can cry like a woman can
It's been that way since time began
No one on earth is lonelier than a lonely woman...
