Disengage her as he whispers forever
Disenchanted in the early morning light
There he puts her, in the shadow of his eyes
And she knows she might not make it out this time

Thought she heard the angels singing
Turns out it was falling leaves
And winter never gave her anything

And there she goes, exposed
In the wake of selfish eyes
And in the clear, she'll disappear
There everything will be all right

Disregarded in a cradle of comfort
Disillusioned by the hope that never comes

Thought she had herself a rainbow
Turns out they just disappear
And leave you in a sky that's all too clear

And there she goes, exposed
In the wake of selfish eyes
And in the clear, she'll disappear
There everything will be all right
All right
All right

Thought she heard the angels singing
Turns out they just disappear
And leave you in a sky that's all too clear
Yeah

And there she goes, exposed
In the wake of selfish eyes
And in the clear, she'll disappear
There everything will be all right

All right
