You wrote a course,
For seven years.
No matter what you had, you feared.
And when you smile,
Across the day,
The ramparts waved you every may.

How can I bleed when someone new is in front of me,
When you're running,
The pieces fall apart and the letters read?

You've got a heart,
Just like machines,
What ever you want that to mean.
And when you smile,
Like birds of prey,
The rapture marks you in every way.

How can I bleed when someone new is in front of me,
When you're running,
The pieces fall apart and the letters read?

You've got a heart,
Just like machines,
What ever you want that to mean.
And when you smile,
Like birds of prey,

The rapture marks you in every way.

Can I have your attention. Please listen. Are you listening?

How can I bleed when someone new is in front of me,
How can I bleed when someone new is in front of me,
When you're running,
The pieces fall apart and the letters read?
