"Falling Into Me"

Morning seems to come around
A little sooner than expected
And all of yesterday's events
Looking back are now reflected

And all the many words that ran through your head
And all the many words that were better left unsaid

What is it about you
That makes you hold on to
Those things you just can't have?
What is it inside you
That makes you blind to
All but what you want to see?

Just what is it that you're saying?
Is that all you have to say?
I think I might like an explanation
Before I walk away

Just don't think twice before you speak
For there will be no turning up my cheek

What is it about you
That makes you hold on to
Those things you just can't have?
What is it inside you
That makes you blind to
All but what you want to see?

You're walking so tall
As if you won't fall
Yet you're stumbling as you speak
And I can't decide to remain beside you
As you're falling into me

What is it about you
That makes you hold on to
Those things you just can't have?
What is it inside you
That makes you blind to

All but what you want to see

You're walking so tall

As if you won't fall

Yet you're stumbling as you speak

And I can't decide to remain beside you

As you're falling into me
