"The Blame"

Underneath the darkness of a mutilated soul
Lies the possibilities of hate revenge and rage
From childhood abused beaten torn and murdered
The soul tries to survive though it's sources restricted Will we ever understand why some men bash their wives
Some women molest their children
Some children seek out the weak
And devour the essence of their youth

We all need to be empowered to live out fulfilled lives
Women free from male domination
Men from socialisation bred into essence of their being Controlling them like puppets from a master yet unseen
To be free from the world and the pull of it's sin Men against women race against race child against child
See the pain in their face
Help those who need help do not reject the poor Only Christ's love can restore the innocence you knew once before

Break away the chains of hate
Open your souls to the love from on high
It has changed my life and helps me challenge
The mistakes of my fathers
Who were themselves puppets not knowing any better
Now I clearly see
SO WHO DO WE BLAME OURSELVES
