Any girl who hangs out in a honky tonk
Who smokes my cigarettes and drinks my wine
Some call her a bad girl but to me she means the world
'Cause she's holding these lonely hands of mine.

She listens while I cry on her shoulder
She runs her slender fingers through my hair
Other men may hold her tight but right now tonight
She's holding these lonely hands of mine.

She's holding the hands that once held you so tight
She smiles each time I call her by your name
She listens to my same sad story every night
She says I'm right and she gives you the blame.

Any girl who hangs out in a honky tonk
Who smokes my cigarettes and drinks my wine
Some call her a bad girl but to me she means the world
'Cause she's holding these lonely hands of mine.

'Cause she's holding these lonely hands of mine...
