We cannot hide all that we fear inside
No sense in trying to pretend that all is good
We cannot throw away all that we've learned
Wasting our lives away hoping that tomorrow comes

Sometimes the world is standing still
We cry about it all way too much its common ground
But if this is all we have
Then I raise my glass up

There's no way that we could have known
What all this is for
Cause we never threw the stone
That crashed into the core of this
I walk down the same road hoping to find
A taste of that innocence that we have left behind

Sometimes the world is standing still
We cry about it all way too much its common ground
But if this is all we have
Then I raise my glass up

When love is hiding
When love is hiding
When love is all gone
Its like trying to sleep when your trust is depleted

Sometimes the world is standing still
We cry about it all way too much its common ground
But if this is all we have
Then I raise my glass up to it all
To it all
To it all
