Title: Angeline

There's a name on the wall but you can't make it out there's a noise in the hall but there's no one about so you sneak out of bed, hoping you'll catch Angeline your face is growing dark 'coz you fold out your heart, Angeline.

There's a crack in the window, now there's snow on the floor there's a wind out there howling, but you want to make sure as you light up a candle she knocks on your door, Angeline

Then your face is growing pale, as you spell out her name,
Angeline

Angeline, you've got nothing to fear, it's only me, you're in for a treat Angeline, I wish you'd see the other me the one you're about to release

You've heard all about her, but you haven't seen her face when she enters your room, you're no longer afraid 'coz you'll now that if you'll die, you'll die with a smile, Angeline

You just stare for a while, then closing your eyes and believe..

Angeline, you've got nothing to fear,
it's only me, you're in for a treat

her hair is untidy, her eyes they look mild she has a rope hanging 'round her, it was made for her child as she unfolds her gown, you see her shoulders they're burned from the sun so you stretch out your hand, just to see if you can, but she's gone..

Angeline, you've got nothing to fear,
it's only me, you're in for a treat Angeline, I'd wish you'd see the other me
the one you're about to release
the one you're about to release..
