I take off with the aeroplane thinking 'bout yesterday
if it's already part of the past I rethink the promises made, things I didn't say
the stages we pass..
Cos it's all 'bout a girl
Mine is a perfectly predictable world

She's a New Yorker, and me, I'm on my way out of town
She's a New Yorker, and me, I'm spread all around

In my hand there's a sleeping pill, rolled into a dollar bill It's got a name, but I cannot recall In my mind theres an ongoing fight between wrong and right and the end isn't happy at all,
so I ask for a drink cos I think of unthinkable things

Like leaving New York without giving her the ring

She's a New Yorker, to me, it's the weirdest thing

When we're alone we're almost like children so afraid to let go when we're apart I count the days by the sickened then the telephone calls

There's this ad in a magazine revealing a one-night dream it's shines like the sun (Shines like the sun) and I cannot but stare at this girl cos her clothes are not on (oooh-oooh) That's except for her shoes (oooh-oooh)
It doesn't look like she's gonna move

She's a New Yorker, and me, I'm spread all around She's a New Yorker, and me, seems I'm homewhere bound..
