Moonlight

Embrace the autumns night

The unsilent wind sail the shadows

And the skies starlit pride

The silvertears that freeze the ground

Are lifelessly falling in endless line

A gaze of void in the empty night

The eyes that in the moonlight shine

Fogcovered soil and the icewinds veil

Seven spells cast and the moon turns red

The stars fell down the sky is ripped

And silvertears are now blood

Rain falls

So does the night

Over these endless landscapes

Dressed in a silvery wintry shade

And blood falls on the ground

Thou unseen in the darkest night

Light is now so desolate

As the moongate opens wide

In moonlight

I am at one with thee autumns night

In the unsilent darkest winter shadow

The silvertears stains in the snow

Though not alone in these landscapes

Tears still will fall

For these tears are not mine, but thine

Even in the silent void

The steps of blood are followed

A grief contained

Reach out for your soul

Dragged through the soil

In forgotten oblivion

And no death will be called upon
