You keep on looking back
You keep on looking back
You keep on looking back
You keep on looking back
And I could tell by the way that you look
And act just like someone who's in the past
You can watch your videocassettes
And romanticize, but none of it will last
You keep on looking back
You keep on looking back
You keep on looking back
And you always try to describe
How they don't make them like they used to do

But all you know is a lie
When all you want can be broken in two
You keep on looking back
You keep on looking back
You keep on looking back
And I don't care if you dye
Your hair and change your name
Cause when you wake up in the morning
You will still be the same
You keep on looking back
You keep on looking back
You keep on looking back
