Still find you in the strangest places
Your friends are still mine
And when we talk we avoid all talk of you
But I'll think about you from time to time

And when I see you it's like you don't see me
I became invisible without my knowing
I won't talk to you and you'll stare through me
And I'll feel quite frustrated

So tell me
Who the hell are you
To ignore me like that
I was nothing ever but good to you
And why do I crave your attention, some affection
I should be satisfied knowing that you were wrong

I remember nights driving in my car
Just staring at the stars
I leaned back my head
And when I closed me eyes
I felt like I could fly
Out of my body, out of my mind

But now when I see you
It's like you don't see me
I became invisible without my knowing
I won't talk to you
And you'll stare through me
And I'll feel quite frustrated

And tell me
Who the hell are you to ignore me like that
I was nothing ever but good to you
Now why do I crave your attention, some affection
I should be satisfied knowing you were wrong

And I'm angry
And it's justified, I know
But I just can't accept that anger is all
I'll ever have for memories of you
