You always smile, but there's a frown inside.
Travel a mile to capture a crown only to hide
to capture a crown only to hide

What are you running, running from?
What is it you will escape?
What are you running, running from?
You could be so great

Running again must feel like sin.
For the wear on your soul has taken a toll
Your eyes deceive what you know to believe

What are you running, running from?
What is it you will escape?
What are you running, running from?
You could be so great

What are you running, running from?
What is it you will escape?
What are you running, running from?
You could be so great

What are you running, running from?
What is it you will escape?
What are you running, running from?
You could be so great
