Give up the giving shot
Dedication, to the places that you never need to hide
Occupations, the opportunity to see yourself in lights

And all the city fires
And the tabloid lies
And the television guys
For the missions and the boulevards
And the way it is when money's all you got

Stop and stare
At the accidents and stars that bore you
We don't dare, sing another song for, California

Anywhere
Where the city lights are hopeless for you
We don't care, I need another song for, California

Shut up and give me a shot
On occasion, to the places that you never want to die
On the station, everybody hears but no one needs to try

On the telephone, on the methane dare
Every minute that you scream

For the errant scars and the dying stars
Every second that you take to fake your life

Stop and stare
At the accidents and stars that bore you
We don't dare, sing another song for, California

Anywhere
Where the city lights are hopeless for you
We don't care, I need another song for, California

Stop and stare
At the accidents and stars that bore you
We don't dare, sing another song for, California

Anywhere
Where the city lights are hopeless for you

We don't care, I need another song for, California
