

My Epiphany "Small Town"

Visit "Small Town" on MotoLyrics.com i was raised in a small town i couldn't wait to leave that small town 'cause i couldn't sit around and think that ignorance is surely killing me and i'll be left flipping the sign at a closing burger king with kids who gave up just like me it is no one's fault

'cause no one wants to live this way at all but they're so consumed their dreams just fade away but what would you trade to get one thing to take what love has made the system is flawed and the system fails us all i need you to recall, because right now i can't feel your love at all
and i need that here to correct my past mistakes
the only real thing here is you, and i wonder, watching, which one you would choose i just hit the hard ground, but i was running when i hit the hard ground
i watched the dirt beneath my feet, and all the bridges that were burning behind me i'll be so free, someday baby but you're like me, you'll have to wait and see
it is no one's fault
love has made
i need you to recall, because right now i can't feel your
the only real thing here is you,
lies can run while truth is tying it's shoes for you
some dreams take so long, don't ever let go we've come too far, to give up and go home
some dreams take so long, don't ever let go
