Under the blue horizon
Down on the desert sand
I lay in need of water
In need of fruitful land
Under the clear horizon
Under the burning sun
I wait for life to find me
To fill my cup again

Under the starlit darkness
Laying on a cold cold ground
The tension holds me tightly
I listen for a sound
Under the silent darkness
Under the daunting star
I sense my place of refuge
Is never far

Under the blue horizon
Down on the desert sand
I've given up my journey
In search for better land
Under the clear horizon
Under the burning sky
I wait for life to find me
The life that once was mine

This is my expectation
That hope will search and find
It comes my way I think
Will it be here on time
Will it come to rescue
Will it find my way
Will it walk past me
Or will it stay
