Here on a grass field

We'd stare down at the stars,

imagined we might fall, fall away to outer space.

And she would hold so tightly,

the grass blades in her hands like anchors to the ground

She was scared to float away.

-Chorus:

I see them more than I see you,

so how could they be so far away?

You're further than the stars, I see.

Someday you might return.

I'm not a lonely man,

but sometimes I regret

not going with her then she was free to drift away.

And now with so much time to grow.

I wonder if she still lays down on that field staring down and thinks of me.

-Chorus:

I see them more than I see you,

so how could they be so far away?

You're further than the stars, I see.

Someday you might return.

-Solo:

-Chorus:

I see them more than I see you,

so how could they be so far away?

You're further than the stars, I see.

Someday you might return.

You're further than the stars, I see.

You're further than the stars, I see.

You're further than the stars, I see.

Someday you might return.
