Michael Timmins

She hugged his head so hard to her heart
it made her gasp for air.

If this was not the way Love felt then for Love she did not care.

"I want to run beside a moving train yelling farewells in the rain.

The tears that fall will be bittersweet,
'cause I know I'll see him again."

If I lost you know I would feel as hollow as a bone.

He could not help but hang his eyes
her beauty held him so.

If this was not a state of Grace then, Grace, he'd never know.

"I want to yell farewell from a crowded pier
just me and a thousand goodbyes.

The tears that fall will be bittersweet,
'cause soon she'll be back my side."

If I lost you know I would feel as hollow as a bone.

"You won't lose me ", he replied,

"together our lives have been sewn.

If I lost you now I would feel as hollow as a bone.

We will kiss goodnight under a starlit sky

whisper oaths at a lumbering moon, dream sweet dreams until the morning comes and serves us the dawn in our room."

If I lost you now I would feel as hollow as a bone.
