Have I seen too much of this world?

No

But I think I've seen enough

And what I saw I don't like

Servus:

From the top of the mountain

He is watching his frozen field

Harvesters of sorrow

Are doing well their jobs indeed

Servus:

Obviously satisfied He turns his look

But I see no happiness on his face

He walks slowly to his throne

A ruler of dark, forsaken place

Servus:

My Lord, is there something wrong?

Haven't all your orders been fulfilled?

Haven't all your enemies been destroyed

And their bodies buried deep in the silt?

Emperor:

No, Servus, nothing's wrong

Except the certainty of my fate

The fate that I have chosen

Since there was no choice to be made

Emperor:

We live our lives in a game

That someone else has made

We must play by their rules

Until our purpose begins to fade

Emperor:

So you see

It is my destiny

To watch the end of days

Emperor:

So far you have served me well

But if you could make a choice
Then what would you rather be?
Servant in Heaven or king in Hell
