Shouldn't I Have learned to be a person who would love forever
Instead of being forced to find out on my own
The day I stayed home because I was sick and in need of a father
You left me here standing, weeds overgrown

Why did you run away?
Constantly running away
Am I a son today?
Or did you run away?

I remember it was Christmas time and we were putting lights up on the house Everything was well as far as I knew Then I broke a blue bulb, hell broke loose, hearing words I never heard Can't believe you wanna teach that to someone

I stop by your house even though we both know it was a rare occasion
Brother with me 'cause we know how you are We're climbing in the chair, brother sitting on the couch, disowning the papers
And now we all know, third time's a charm

Why did you run away?
Constantly running away
Am I a son today?
Or did you run away? x3

Fatherâ€¦
Fatherâ€¦
Fatherâ€¦
