Maybe your view of quality is more than you can be
You bear your ideology so stoically
That all that you can see, is inferiority
Here I am, my head in a cloud Can't you see my feet dangling, down there on the ground?
I guess I'm fool, cause I thought I could recognize
The people who cared for me,
I thought I could draw the line
That surrounded my friends

Oh I, I'm not going to give up

And I don't mind the quitters, so much as the thieves

It's tolerable company, given the means
I won't waste my time crying
If I'm the last to understand The difference between us, be it preference or circumstance
I'm losing the faith that youth hold in longevity
I guess that's the price for bartering naivety Preferring the comfort that the skeptic takes in disbelief

I'm not going to give up
