"Lover"

I am a lover. I am a shame.
I am appalled by what I fame.
I am a lover, but I've had my share of
Flirting with the darkest affairs.

You can find me here with my head against the wall
Lost in my regrets and every time I fall
You catch me in your hands.
You circle me like a wedding band.

I have a lover, faithful and true
Cares for me in all that I do.
I have a lover.
My song you have sung with love on
Your lips and grace on your tongue.

You can find me here with my head against the wall,
Lost in my regrets and every time I fall -
You catch me in your hands.
You circle me like a wedding band.
A promise from Heaven, a promise from you,
A promise to love, I will hold onto.

God of new beginnings, to you I cry,
"Teach me how to love. Teach me how to die."
In death there's forgiveness, and forgiveness calls on new life!
You can find me here with my head against the wall,
Lost in my regrets and every time I fall -
You catch me in your hands.
