You melt like ice in my glass 'cause I know that ice just cannot last
And it's always been this way one piece of ice just melts into the rest
That day the love was in your eyes but not in mine you hint and yearn You'll twist and turn for me but I can't see because I'm blind to all the things That don't don't attract me and to all those things that should
It might sounds stupid but I don't have feeling for all the things that I can't feel You don't move me, you don't thrill me, it's too easy
I don't want you because you want me you're too easy
In many ways being here is like a paradox of fate

'Cause what we want and what we crave we can't get oh we'll never get
If everything is revealed well then it's done Where's the subtlety where's the chase and where's the fight Simplicity makes mediocrity all right You melt like ice but I don't want you I want her the elusive one, I only want what I can't get Sitting on roofs is when I fall in love It gets so old always doing what you're told where's the spark Where's the danger oh there's no drive no desire when you melt like ice
