Splashing through the water on the motorway - The headlights shine every drop of rain

- And every mile takes a minute and every minute lasts an hour - And there's so many miles

'till I'm home again

- And staring through the gathering mists on the window - I see that paying the price came so soon - And I swear that those eyes cut deeper into me - Than they've ever cut into you Ch: - And still the fires won't go out - That no power of the mind can drive away - And still all I see are your eyes calling - And the sadness and the hatred and the love and the pain

- Everybody knows this aching like an old friend - And everybody feels it the same - But I'm out here in this desperate night in the middle of nowhere - Driving faster, faster through the rain

Ch: - And still the fires won't go out - And still I wish I was home - And still all I ever see are your eyes calling - And still I love you with my whole soul

- Am I trying to raise a toast when the glass is already empty - Am I paying the price now the wasted years are through - I swear that those eyes cut deeper into me - Than they'll ever cut into you
