The station lights are low
A train it waits but knows not where it goes
I see a brown-eyed girl
Staring out into the brave unknown

And she tells me it's ok
But the train can't wait forever
If this is who you want to be
The boy must let the man take over

I've never felt such life in my veins
No secrets left to hide
She's telling me to get on that train
To see what's at the other side

The strangers wave goodbye
A million faces lighting up the sky
Yet she's all I need

And she tells me of the nights when the little boy would fly from all the dreams that wouldn't come true
This is who you want to be
Catch the train and go and see what's out there...

I've never felt such life in my veins
She's telling me to get on that train
To see what's at the other side

Maybe I can walk a mile and how you've saved my life

I've never felt such life in my veins
She's telling me to get on that train
I'll see you at the other side
The other side...
