Julia makes up lies for children;
she only wants to be their friend.
Julia turns her mirrors to the wall;
she only wants to begin again.

And Julia, do you have a friend
who can wash away your sins?
And if there's no one in your life,
does that mean you can't begin?

Hey, Julia, can you make it on your own?
Hey, Julia, don't you know this is your home?

Julia sleeps with diamond earrings;
she thinks of it as a test.
Julia keeps razors by her bed;
she doesn't know what she'll cut next.

And Julia, do you have a friend
who will take you far away?
And if there's no one sleeping next to you
does that mean you have to stay?
Hey, Julia, can you make it on your own?
Hey, Julia, don't you know this is your home?

Julia paints a garden on her wall
the door is open to let the breezes blow.
Julia dances in the shade and in the light
Julia dances to make her garden grow.
And Julia, do you have a friend
who will ease you of your pain?
And if there's no one you can cradle does that mean you can't be saved?
