The valley green was so serene
In the middle ran a stream so blue...
A maiden fair, in despair, once had met her true love there and she told him...

She would say...

"Promise me , when you see, a white rose you'll think of
me
I love you so,
Never let go,
I will be your ghost of a rose..."

Her eyes believed in mysteries
She would lay amongst the leaves of amber
Her spirit wild, heart of a child, yet gentle still and quiet and mild and he loved her...

When she would say...

"Promise me , when youu see, a white rose you'll think
of me
I love you so,
Never let go,
I will be your ghost of a rose..."

When all was done, she turned to run
Dancing to the setting sun as he watched her
And ever more he thought he saw
A glimpse of her upon the moors forever

He'd hear her say...

"Promise me , when you see, a white rose you'll think of
me
I love you so,
Never let go,
I will be your ghost of a rose..."

"Promise me , when youu see, a white rose you'll think
of me
I love you so,

Never let go,
I will be your ghost of a rose..."
