I am Eternus, the Lord of the High Shadow Castle. In the land of mists the gray mane of midnight rain whips it's mossy stone walls, which stand amidst the black forest. And the silver stars look through the narrow windows. I, the lonely king, embraced with pride, sit on the ice throne, bearing a black sword, without pity, in my hand... The shadows of the dark pain, full of madness, burn my eyes...
And the eyes char and crust with ice... Blood, red blood... Giving me life... And hatred...

The bloodthirst comes to me at night, whirling as the stab-wound of the moon upon the face of severe black stormclouds... In the sky rainbows twist the fiery wings of hate, and the scarlet fires burn in the wood, when I, being in a wolf's skin, run under the branches strewn with cold raindrops, and the death flies with me...
