And while the city sleeps
I wont weep because I couldn't keep my boyfriend
And the summers end is here again
And the leaves are golden
Under the grand silverbirch tree

While thinking bout the people we meet, dancing feet
Wasters on the cover of a magazine
People you've kissed, people you lust
And the ones that you might not ever remember what's the use

I'm not what I was last summer
Not who I was in the spring
Tell me tell me tell me when will we learn
We love it and we leave it and we watch it burn Damn these wild young hearts, damn these wild young hearts

Now that the city's awake, my heart aches
So what a silly mistake it seems I've made You left your keys under my bed left a thumping in my head
I would say sorry what's the use

Coz I'm not what I was last September
And I don't wear the same robes in may
We know we shouldn't do it but we do it anyway
We know we might regret it but it seemed ok
Damn these wild young hearts
Damn these wild young hearts
Damn these wild young hearts

If now is forever what's to prove Coz it wont be the same next summer
And I guess I'll see you in the spring
Somebody tell me tell me tell me when will I learn
I love it and I leave it and I watch it burn
Damn these wild young hearts
I told you damn these wild young hearts
Damn these wild young tell me tell me tell me when will

I learn
Damn these wild young hearts
