You were looking far
Did you find yourself?
You searched through the stars
Asking for help
Displaying the laughter
And hiding the shame
You say that you're older now

But there's still a light in your eyes
That seems wild
And there's still a part of your soul
You know we can't control
And there's still a fight in your mind
To remain a child

There is something else you need to find

It must have been real hard being by yourself
Or did you leave your mark on someone else?
Delaying the answer, inviting the blame
You say all that's over now

But there's still a light in your eyes
That seems wild
And there's still a part of your soul
You know we can't control
And there's still a fight in your mind
To remain a child

There is something else you need to find

If you leave this place could you be restrained?
If you think you've changed, what are you running away from?

Is there still a light in your eyes?
Is there still a part of your soul?
Is there still a fight in your mind to remain a child?
And is there something else you need?

But there's still a light in your eyes
That seems wild

And there's still a part of your soul
You know we can't control
And there's still a fight in your mind
To remain a child

There is something else you need to find
