Dreams lie shattered shards endure now the wraiths her mind possess Like shells of precious flowers dried out and hung with love
Making eyes into frozen temples that stare you in her gaze
So pale so cold so beautiful if not clinically insane

Now the decades pass unanswered and she prays with silent lips
Sometimes she talks to angels when she has her little fits
But you must believe in something - sometimes that something's real
Sometimes our motivations are tied up in what we feel

So elegant her poetry falls from her pallid lips She flows like icy roadways when the wheels start to slip
And if her course lays waste to this I pray away to your design
Her minions shall dance your dreaming eyes and sing her fragile rhymes

Now the decades pass unanswered and she prays with
silent lips
Sometimes she talks to angels when she has her little
fits
something's real
Sometimes our motivations are tied up in what we feel

Ave Maria
Just give us something
But it's lost on deafened ears
Ave Maria
Just give us something
To ears that cannot hear

Now the decades pass unanswered and she prays with
silent lips

something's real
Sometimes our motivations are tied up in what we feel

Just give us something
But it's lost on deafened ears
Ave Maria
She's saying something
To ears that cannot hear

Just give us something
Ave Maria
If god is speaking She's the only one who hears.
