You've played this hand, refused to stand has dignity dissolved?
How far away I heard you say
In empathy devolved-
You cast your heart two worlds apart and lost sight of your soul
But the sun will rise with cleaner eyes
That you pretend to know...

I stood here waiting for so long
I stood here praying I was wrong.

You said that we could last forever, forever and a day.
You said that we could last forever, if only I would stay-
I know, within your soul, the light fights trough the rain
But if you promise me forever, I know that it's in vain.

If silence slips from sacred (God's own) lips
Shall the world un-become.
The tears of saints in blood you paint
A cowards word is none
And with no voice you forfeit choice and crucify your thoughts
But see a face in tortured grace
Whose eyes belonged to God

I stood here waiting for so long
I stood here praying I was wrong.

You said that we could last forever, forever and a day.
You said that we could last forever, if only I would stay-

I know, within your soul, the light fights trough the rain
but now a promise of forever, won't take away the pain.

Sangrael, sangrael
A lovers cup before a wishing well
Sangrael, sangrael
Where all who thirst shall drink
Sangrael, sangrael
From heavens height to the depths of hell
Sangrael, sangrael

All who thirst shall drink

I stood here waiting for so long
I stood here praying I was wrong.

You said that we could last forever, forever and a day.
You said that we could last forever, if only I would stay-
I know, within your soul, the light fights through the rain
But if you promise me forever, I know that it's in vain.

You said that we could last forever, forever and a day.
You said that we could last forever, if only I would stay-
I know, within your soul, the light fights through the rain
but now a promise of forever, won't take away the pain.
