"Return (Coming Home)"

I've seen the terrible hand of struggle and felt the pain that hubris brings I have tasted the wisdom of divinity and the horror of its sting

And though they tell you i am lost and their words report my death is come the fates have left me breathing still Very much alive

And though my mind is cut by battles fought so long ago
I return victorious
I am coming home
And if the paths that I have followed have tread against the flow there is no need for sorrow

I am coming home

For the distance I have traveled Upon and ocean of despair have led me back into your arms once more an answer to a little prayer
