"Against The Grain"

Trapped in conflict,
Release control.
Bring me back on track,
Condemn my soul.
For the truth I speak,
The views I stress,
For the mind that trips,
In this one big mess
Pouring sand,
Drown my voice.
I never had a choice,
Where we belong.

I have never rejoiced from the roots where we grow.
And all of this frustration is inside of me,
You can see my intention to set you free.
The eye of the sun redeems my pain,
The life that I live runs against the grain.

If you join my side,
This world seems unreal.
All the scares that hide,
And will never heal.
I won't forfeit now,
Hourglass has turned.
Mist has made me blind,
My views I have earned.

I have never rejoiced from the roots where we grow.
And all of this frustration is inside of me,
You can see my intention to set you free.
The eye of the sun redeems my pain,
The life that I live runs against the grain.

If I could change one thing,
I would not feel again,
I'm sick of all your taunts,
And I can not retaliate.
Remember what you've said,
This is your darkest day,
It's trapped inside your head,
And I could never be that way.

And we fly,
And we fall,
And you trust,
In us all.

I have never rejoiced from the roots where we grow.
And all of this frustration is inside of me,
You can see my intention to set you free.
The eye of the sun redeems my pain,
The life that I live runs against the grain.
