Take me somewhere nice
To some tired island in your home called paradise
Though we both walk home, we both feel alone
Like escapees with nowhere to go
I can think of a thousand ways
To get good and lost beyond these hopeless days
When we'll rendezvous out of the blue
And take a deep breath, just we two
And we'll be so far gone, the oars will row on
And we will happily wave so long
If we hook a dream
And it tows us back down this older street,
We'll say hello, oh, oh
Take us wherever you go
Take me somewhere deep
Because I'm quite exhausted and I need to sleep
Upon the great divide, I wake up beside myself just to know I'm alive
Every weight around pays me a visit and drags my islands down
And they sting like growing pains
Iced in the veins of the guy who's not ready to die
If I may be so bold, I'll weather the cold
'Cause I'm not afraid to grow old
If we hook a dream
And it tows us back down this older street
We'll say hello, oh, oh
Take us wherever you go.
