i know what i have to do and do it. i know what i have to do and do it. but don't know what it is until i'm done. i know it must be rough, you're so much smarter than your friends. come clean in jokes. integrity in tennis shoes. waiting thinking how'd i like to be kept waiting. territory mutinies horizon. disease teaches immunity. a promise implied can't be broken. and even now in the sunlight with grapefruit juice and coffee bound and bountied to winter without end would you two like each other or are you too alike? i know what i have to do and do it. i know what i have to do and do it. but don't know what it is until it's done. i've been inventing you and continue inventing you. may we all make it home safely. i know it must be rough, you're so much smarter than your friends. rehearsing disasters and forecasting all your needs. i dance early then got shy and had to go home early. the mirage will fade as it unfolded. the plot's defamed it's own voltage. a promise at the time can't be beat. and even now as the snow is opening it's whole in peices and wets each grieving hold of last year's trash it's not impossible to think of you thinking of me. way we all make it home safely.
