(Pam Tillis/Bob DiPiero)

She saw the ragged edge of nowhere from a fast moving train
Watched the scenery fly by with a fever in her brain Seemed like a good time at the time, rolling down the track
Now the only thing she wants is a one-way ticket back

She's a homeward looking angel and she's feeling mighty tired
Her party dress is tattered but her vision is inspired (She went gunning for glory but her bullets all misfired)
And that girl looking back in the mirror, Lord, made such a mess of things She's leaving in the morning soon as she can find her wings
Soon as she can find her wings

She's so hungry at heart for a piece of Mama's pie Served up on Grandma's china after church on Sunday night
Papa's probably turning out the light and heading up the stairs
And the wayward child he never talks about still turns up in his prayers

She's a homeward looking angel and she's feeling
mighty tired
Her party dress is tattered but her vision is inspired
(She went gunning for glory but her bullets all misfired)
And that girl looking back in the mirror, Lord, made such
a mess of things
She's leaving in the morning soon as she can find her
wings
Soon as she can find her wings

There's the road ahead and the road behind All roads lead to home this time

She's a homeward looking angel and she's feeling

mighty tired
Her party dress is tattered but her vision is inspired
(She went gunning for glory but her bullets all misfired)
And that girl looking back in the mirror, Lord, made such
a mess of things
She's leaving in the morning soon as she can find her
wings
Soon as she can find her wings
