

Paragon Of Beauty "Comfort Me, Infinity"

Visit "Comfort Me, Infinity" on MotoLyrics.com

I take fright at answers you can't give Don't forget to wonder Hyacinths, they knew how meadows sing
We've unlearned dreaming ages ago

Kestrels flap their graceful wings
O let me persist in dizzy contemptions
Is there anyone who roused the early swallows O thou kindred spirit below a star-sprangled sky

Don't you listen to the quiet Can't you taste its heady skin O thou uttermost poetry, describe my heartbeat

While the trees unfold, picking scattered gold
I just lie beneath
In the bloom of youth
Would you think about fate
If a breeze of hope blinked through the thickest solitude
Would you die within me
If your dreams came true and I couldn't run away with you
Would you reach out for stars
If you noticed that your life was inaudible and mute
O thou horrible crowd.
I don't regret my call for eternity

Do you smell the air of my soul despair There's a lighthouse at the sea - that is me I wish to row beyond thy landmarks
My scared silence seems to be a wise man's brow

