What a shame, what a shame we all remain
Such fragile broken things
A beauty half betrayed
Butterflies with punctured wings
Still there are darkened places
Deep in my heart
Where once was blazing light, now
There's a tiny spark

Oh glory
Come and find me
Oh glory
Come and find me

Dancing all alone
To the sound of an enemy's song
I'll be lost until... you find me
Fighting on my own
In a war that's already been won
I'll be lost until
You come and find me here, oh glory

What a mess, what a mystery we've made
Of love and other simple things
Learning to forgive
Even when it wasn't a mistake
I question every human
Who won't look in my eyes
Scars left on my heart formed
Patterns in my mind

Oh glory
You will find me

Dancing all alone
To the sound of an enemy's song

I'll be lost until... you find me
Fighting on my own
In a war that's already been won
I'll be lost until
You come and find me here, oh glory

Like the moon, we borrow our light
I am nothing but a shadow in the night
So if you'll let me, I will catch fire
To let your glory and mercy shine
