Northern winds came whistling through evergreens Like trains, one temper broods until a temperature breaks
And blooms, smashing and tearing what we've worked toward One hand will break what the other hand builds

Board the windows up, keep the cellar locked We'll feign restraint until it's over and settled Our wills are just as strong as the walls we built for them
I won't rebuild what I have crumbled, I'm tired, tired

What is faith? It's been replaced by insurance policies Once one thing breaks just have it replaced Like faith, once whistled through the trees
Now so still, one hand will break what the other hand builds

Board the windows up, keep the cellar locked
You never know when little fevers could flare up For ever day it's calm, there must be be something brewing
There's always something storming through these evergreens
Like trains

Northern winds came
Northern winds came
Crashing and burning down our wills
