I bottled it up and now I'm letting go.
Our picture is hanging by the telephone.
I think I'm ready to take it down.

You're still down on paper as my next of kin,
But there's no way on earth you'll ever let me in,
I guess we're paying for it now.

You've held my breath for so long,
I think you've damaged my heart,
There's always a chance it could change
Sometimes it's too late to start.

I would try a little harder,
Maybe smile once in a while if I were you.
But I'm not you.
You are who you are.

And I would shout a little louder
Out the window of my car if I were you,
But then again well I'm not you
You are what you are.
I've got a feeling your not changing any time soon.

I'm moving out I've paid the final rent,
Don't worry about me cause I'm the one content,
I hope you find what your looking for

It doesn't matter to me,
Deep down I know what I want.
You'll never put up a fight you couldn't even respond.

I would try a little harder,
Maybe smile once in a while if I were you.
But I'm not you.
You are who you are.

And I would shout a little louder
Out the window of my car if I were you,
But then again well I'm not you
You are what you are.

I've got a feeling your not changing I've always measured,
Me by you. It doesn't matter if you like me now.

I would try a little harder,
Maybe smile once in a while if I were you.
But I'm not you.
You are who you are.

And I would shout a little louder
Out the window of my car if I were you,
But then again well I'm not you
You are what you are.
I've got a feeling your not changing no
I've got a feeling you're not changing no
I've got a feeling you're not changing any time soon.
