You keep on pushing and you'll get your answer
But it won't be the one you want it to be
I think it's funny how we don't get storms around here anymore
And the rain, when it comes, it tastes like nothing

I want you to remember me
For things I never did
'Cause no one in this world deserves
To see my happiness

I know what it's supposed to be like to be young
But it is not the way I thought it would be My paranoia functioned like a broken mirror
To distort and destroy any clarity and what's more

I want you to give back to me
The child I never was
'Cause I believed what I was told
Like everybody does
