She had fallen under frozen water
Tried to gasp a breath of air
The light got darker and the water colder
The death of One so young and fair

When the current pulls you down
My feet will still be on the ground

The cruelest of winters and the Thames had frozen over
She said the ice could hold us both
'Neath my reflection I see her face falling
In death I feel her just as close

Lie on your bed
Sink in the sand
In years they will find you
With reeds in your hand
Under my floorboards
Those skates I have hid
The hallowed waters
Beneath Chapel Bridge
